"KNOWLEDGE IS POWER"

AS fuel must be supplied to any engine in order for that engine to produce results, so we must supply ourselves with some form of fuel, in order that we may advance ourselves both intellectually and materially. This necessary fuel is Knowledge.

Without Knowledge we are powerless, much as an engine without a fuel is powerless. It has been in search of Knowledge that we have studied for several years in elementary and secondary schools, and it is in continuance of this search that some of us will continue to study in higher schools of learning. But regardless of what we have acquired and will acquire through future study, we shall all continue to acquire much practical knowledge through Experience.

Knowledge itself will be of no value to us unless we make practical applications of it. Therefore, if we wish to be successful in Life, we must always be ready and willing to transform our Knowledge into practical decisions and actions, whenever the occasion arises.

So, in order to successfully arrive at the mark at which we have aimed, we must continue to increase our supply of learning, and always willingly and to the best of our ability, apply our Knowledge whenever the occasion arises.

STANTON A. RALSTON

TO OUR PRINCIPAL AND FACULTY

THESE few words are but a slight expression of the deep appreciation which we have for your encouragement, advice, and instruction.

Now, more than ever, do we realize how fortunate we are to have enjoyed the benefits of your guidance.

It is comparatively little we can do at present to demonstrate the respect and gratitude we feel toward you, but the future offers us ample opportunity to give evidence of our sincerity.

EDITORIAL

SENIORS—school is almost over for most of us! Some of us will tread the steps of higher learning, but the greater part will go into the business world.

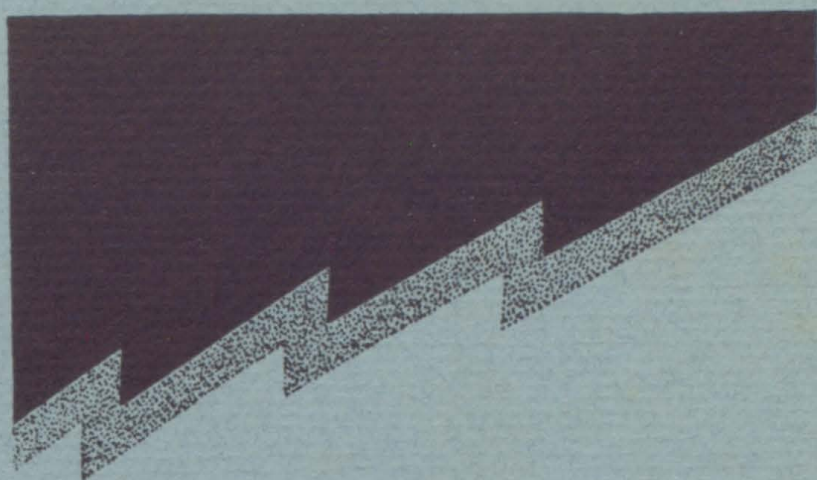

Many of us will be afraid to go. We have been sheltered by the school for such a long time that we will step tremulously on the outward path. The world outside of school is such a huge place, with strangers at every turn. We will need a helping hand, often, to pull us over the hills. How many times will we wish that we were back here? How many times will discouragement strike us? How many times will we feel like giving up?

But so it was when we first started high school. Four years is a mighty long time, when you come to think of it. At the end of these years, we like to remember only the pleasant incidents and forget the others. But our days were not all rosy. Often the blues crept upon us. We were discouraged. We were disillusioned. But we stuck! Through thick and thin, we stuck!

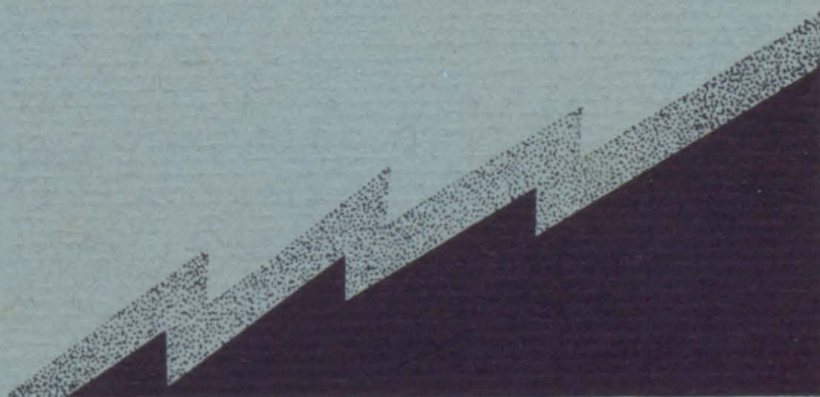

The same policy will apply to other spheres of existence. We have an inkling of what the world will be like. We have been trained for that. But we have much to learn. Some of us may think that our education has about ended. But no; it has just begun. We shall be continuing our education as long as we live. We shall become a part of everything we meet. The more varied our interests, the pleasanter our companionship will be, the more friends we will have, and the happier our lives will be.

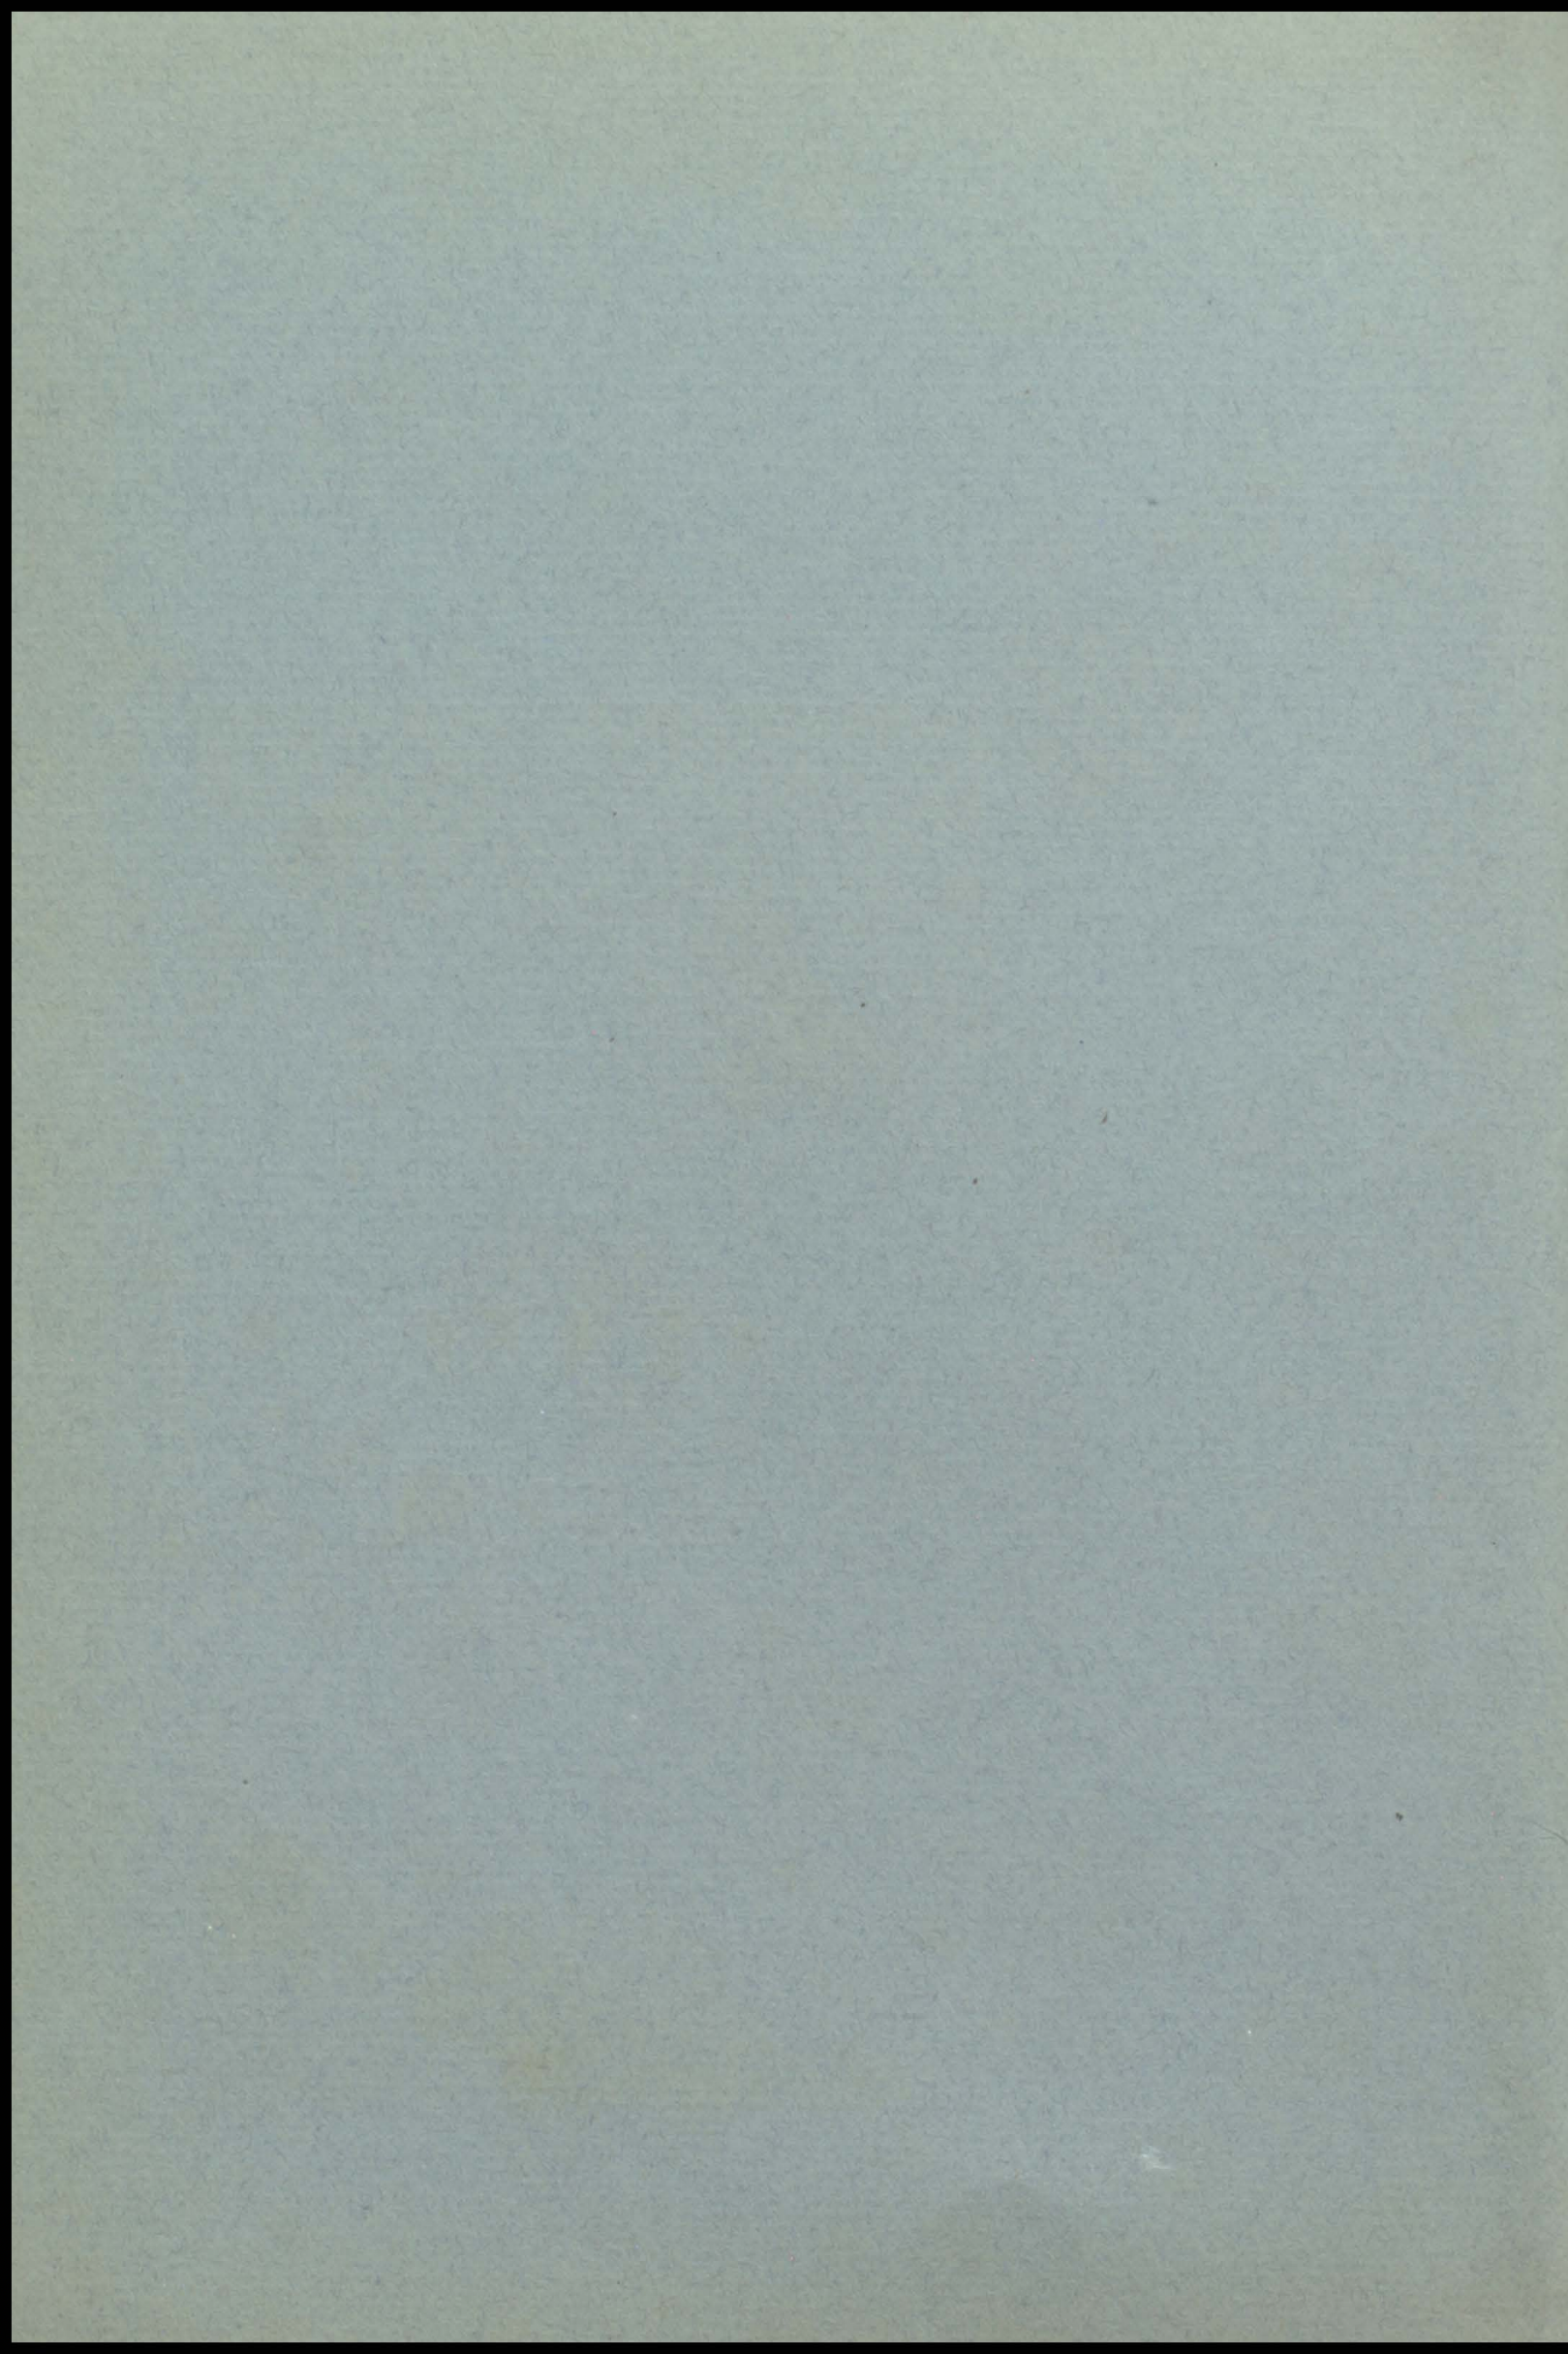

In after years, we will look back to our high school days, and what will we feel? Regret? Or will we look back to those days and feel proud of what we have accomplished since then?

The answer to those questions is to be found on the pages of time. Some of us will walk the path of life buoyantly, hopefully, and full of confidence. Some will be more cautious and investigate each step before it is taken. But we will all be striving toward a certain ideal. The ideals of many of us will be so high as to be unattainable. But it is better thus. The one who is continually striving is forever happy. He who reaches what he considers to be the highest point has nothing to look forward to. By striving toward that goal, we are continually improving ourselves. Patience, perservance, and true character will bring us one step higher. We hope that the traditions and influences we have found in East Side will shape our lives and guide our steps toward a fuller, richer future.

GREETINGS!

THE parade must move on. If any fall out and choose to sit or lie down by the wayside: the rest may not halt. A turn of the head, a wistful look or wave of the hand and the ranks march on and pass out of sight.

Avete! Valet! Hail and farewell to you dear boys and girls on the threshold of young manhood and womanhood, from one who for long years has marched in and watched over the parade.

You have meant much in his life, and he would fain mean something in yours. So accept his best wishes for a brave future and a true life. And, maybe at times, give a fleeting thought to an old friend.

Sincerely,

GEORGE A. GENZMER.

SETTING A GOAL

The goal you set four years ago,
Which seemed so far away,
By striving, with a purpose firm,
You have attained to-day.

This goal you've reached is not an end,
It's meaning, very plain,
Is just to mark your progress
And to spur you on again.

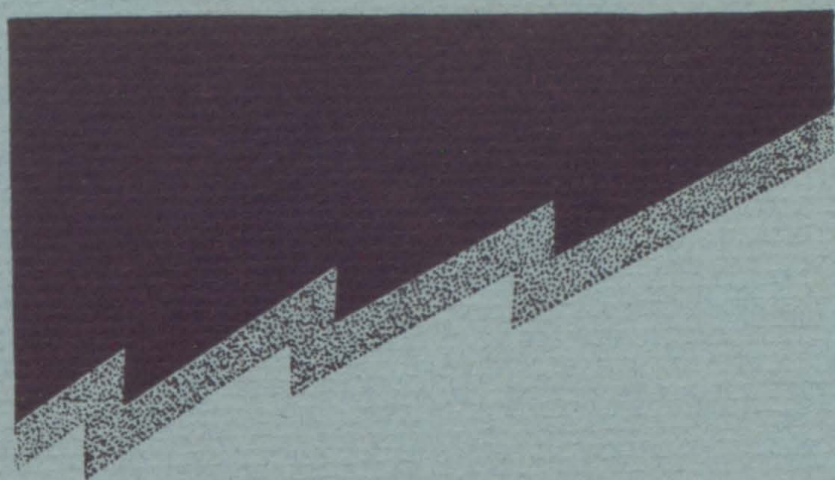

Be not content with finished tasks,
Nor ever satisfied,
They should but serve to stimulate
For duties yet untried.

Make all you do a stepping-stone
To plane, just a bit higher—
An aid to nobler, better things,
To which you may aspire.

Beneath the banner of your youth,
With courage, do your part—
A ready hand to help, in need,
A song within your heart.

May all the worthy goals you set,
Be sought with eager zest.
May each attainment bring a joy,
Because you've done your best.

RETROSPECT

WE stand in anticipation of our graduation night. We are preparing a space for it in our hall of memory—the place of honor, among the many other pictures depicting blissful moments spent in our high school—pictures we hold in reverence. None can enjoy them as we ourselves do, as we retrace our footsteps along the familiar corridors and gaze upon one portraying our first day at school. We lose ourselves in reverie before it—the years fall back, and we are again Freshmen.

Today is our day. We know it well. It is the 11th of September, 1931; the day to which for two months we had looked forward with expectation. Perhaps we enter the building a bit tremulously? That, we hope, is to be excused, for we know not what to expect. We each have within our hand a small card which we were told to present at the school office. But we don't know where the office is. We blunder into classrooms, we round the corridors, but we find no office. Finally, we accost several stiff-spined creatures, and ask them to direct us. They, after a series of amused, scornful glances, delightfully inform us that we are to "go straight ahead, turn to your right, take the elevator, and get off at the fourth floor." We start off in search of the elevators—and stumble into the office. But here we learn that we are to go to the auditorium. We re-enter the now familiar corridors and again prepare to begin our marching through them. But our progress is arrested by a series of loud guffaws emanating from an open doorway. We wander thither to investigate the cause for the apparent merriment, and find ourselves facing a huge crowd, which, we assume, is the bigger—not better, surely—part of us. We join them willingly, and, in course of the next five minutes or so, manage to steal occasional sly, appraising glances at our companions.

We are suddenly conscious of a figure framed in the doorway, toward which all eyes turn eagerly. But soon those same eyes portray anxiety and bewilderment, for the teacher is not at all impressed by us or our number.

We are duly segregated into distinct groups, each of which is assigned to a certain room. Our Home Room is to be 121. Within our new surroundings, our spirits, after a temporary depression, soar high again, but we soon subside at a command given by Mr. Davidheiser. We learn that we are to obey certain rules, and determine to do so, or—detention!

So our school life begins. We meet with many disappointments. The work is not easy; the Seniors not very responsive to our overtures for friendship. We arrive promptly and breathlessly in every class, glad to get away from the crowd parading the corridors, ever scornful, ever taunting. We resent their attitude, and feel the need of revenge, so we gather and debate as to what would be the best means of ridding ourselves of these troublesome pests. We agree that a snowball fight would prove effective, and decide to challenge them when the first snow falls. Time flies past, and our anger cools with the weather. The snow falls unnoticed; we learn to tolerate the Seniors.

Soon we receive word that we are to have a Freshman Frolic and receive cellophane-wrapped lollipops. We make our appearance—and meet with disappointment. Saddened, wiser, we end our Freshman year.

We begin our Sophomore year with what we believe to be assurance. We are now superior to the Freshmen, and many of our classmates dress with an eye to this added dignity. Girls appear balancing themselves on dangerously thin and high heels; the boys assume an air of dignified gentility in their long pants. We amuse ourselves with watching the tactics our classmates would employ in their attempt to live up to the standard they set for themselves. The year passes, and before we are aware of it, the third is upon us.

Our Junior year is peaceful. We lose ourselves in the tranquility of our school life. Soon, however, we receive startling news. We learn that the "good old Recs" are to be discontinued, and are partially relieved to find that we shall not have to go through the ordeal, for we have witnessed some "Recs" that had really wrecked one's dignity.

Days pass. Each brings us nearer to our Senior year. We begin it in the Autumn of 1934.

The first term of our last year is a busy one. We gather early in the term, and hold our first meeting. We discuss our program for the term. First of all, there is the matter of election of our class officers. A Nominating Committee is chosen, which is to report within a few days. We then bring up other matters of interest to us. The "Rec." That, we learn, is to be held in the near future. The meeting is adjourned until the following week. At our second meeting, we hear the report of the Nominating Committee, and accept it. Nominations are made from the floor. The 4B class has entered into the spirit of the occasion enthusiastically. A few days later, the election of the following officers is hailed gladly and cheerfully:

President	WILLIAM BECKER
Vice-President	DOROTHY SNEE
Secretary	JOHANNA GIALANELLA
Treasurer	CARL BRANDT
Sergeants-at-Arms

WILLIAM McCAFFERTY, ETIENNE La POINTE

After this first adjustment, our school life runs smoothly. Many and various committees are appointed by the president. A Motto Committee. Our Motto is: "KNOWLEDGE IS POWER." Then a Color Committee. Our Class Colors are to be Royal Blue and Silver. We wear the colors at our "Rec." The 4A's have prepared a formal program for us. From the Auditorium we go up to the Gymnasium, where we receive refreshments and dance until well past five o'clock. It is a merry party. The 300 4Bs and 4As mingle amiably. So we are initiated. We hold a meeting and discuss plans for our "Prom." It is to be held in December, and in the school Gym. The Gymnasium is transformed into a veritable fairyland of color and gayety. We, with it, are transported into a world of unreality, and for a few hours forget all else and think only of the enjoyment provided for us. We learn later that it was a success, financially as well as socially. And so our first term ends, and we begin the second in much the same way as the first. We elect officers. They are:

President	WILLIAM BECKER
Vice-President	DOROTHY SNEE
Secretary	JOHANNA GIALANELLA
Treasurer	JOHN SIESS
Sergeants-at-Arms.....	THAD GURDAK, JOE GORRIE

Our course and program differs very little from that of the first term. We have again a "Rec" to think of. This one we are to hold for the 4Bs. A musical program is arranged for their entertainment, followed by dancing and refreshments in the Gym. The crowd which gathers is bigger than that of the term before, and much hilarity and amusement prevail.

Other activities now hold our attention. We are to have a play, which is to be held on April 11 and 12. The cast is selected, and rehearsals begin. As we had expected, this is a big success.

So we are ending a busy year. We find ourselves with but few more days at East Side. Soon our high school life shall end, and we shall wander out into the world, but to return ever again to review the past, relieve our youth, and perhaps find happiness again in just—remembering.

4A CLASS

JUST IMAGINE!!

MY step was light and springy that lovely June morning as I walked toward the officers of the Bloomfield, Kay & Company. As a representative of another company, I was really on my way to discuss business with an executive of the above firm; but I also knew that some of my friends held positions there and I looked forward to seeing them.

Thus, pre-occupied with my thoughts I saw nothing of the activities about me. I blindly tripped into someone and when I looked up to apologize, imagine my surprise when I found it to be Don Blakeslee, who was dressed in uniform. He told me that he was a truck driver for the firm I was now visiting. Now, after being driver of a delivery truck for ten years without breaking an axle, he had been promoted to head truck driver, and was he proud. We said our goodbyes, and I walked into the pretentious office building. The elevator that took me up to the thirteenth floor was run by none other than Anthony Leone, who claimed he was successful, for to him "the sky was the limit." Upon being let out at my destination, I was immediately met by Palmira Noguerol, charming office hostess. Learning of the importance of my business, she led me through the office of the private secretary, Terry Massa, and on into the first Vice-President's office. Harold Kay, despite the dignity of his position greeted me in the same breezy manner that has been his always. After the completion of our business, Mr. Kay called for Palmira and to my amazement assigned her to piloting me around the building. It was a welcome surprise, indeed.

Our first stop was the General Office, where we heard the busy hum of activity. Among the stenographers who were typing as if their lives depended upon it, I chanced to see Helen Cicchino, Margaret Lamberti, and Helen Howarth. When they saw and recognized me, a wave of the hand was all they would allow as a greeting, for William McCafferty, general manager and slave-driver, was looking at them with a dangerous glint in his eyes. McCafferty was so busy "Simon Legree-ing" his typist that he did not see his two office boys, Anthony Peda and John White, giggling and talking in a corner. Just then I heard a voice speaking with the rapidity of a machine-gun and found it to be Laura Terepka at the telephone switchboard.

"We'll stop next at the Accounting Department," Palmira said. "We will probably find a few of your friends there, too. By the way, there is to be a gala event tonight sponsored by the company. It is ————. Oh, here is the Accounting Department." We entered, and the first to catch my eye was Lawrence Pecorara, who was bending over a set of books, staring into space and scratching his head as if to seek inspiration for the correct balance of his set. For direct contrast, we looked to John Paliwoda, chief accountant, and his bookkeeping staff of Jennie Luciano, Ellen Ontko, and Norma Klein, who were doing their work neatly and methodically. Ruth Luebking rose at that moment to look up some previous data, for "darn it" her trial balance just wouldn't come out correctly. Realizing the agony she was suffering, I begged Palmira to show me out.

The next visiting place I found to be the Advertising Department, where we saw the Galanty Brothers executing their duties as assistant advertising managers with the zest of those who adore their work. Milton Bialeck, advertising manager, sat at his desk looking none too pleased at the ad he had just received from Fred George. Walter Moydoyz was busily creating a clever cartoon for the advertisement of a new product. Also nearby, Marie Orlando was planning a picturesque store window display of the women's wear. It did my heart good to know that such brilliant and creative minds were the product of old East Side High.

Polly and I were walking along the corridors to the next department when Polly exclaimed, "Oh, as I was saying before, I'd like to invite——." Just then I spied the door marked "Selling and Buying Department," and I interrupted her and entreated her to take me through it. Although I probably had been unkind in interrupting her, she acquiesced.

"Now, Mr. James Turner, if you weren't so plainly lazy you would bring in more sales. From now on I want to see a better showing from you." Thus the exasperated Sales Manager, Francis Wurster, dismissed his salesman upon whom the calling down seemed to have no effect. A few of the other salespeople who fared more smoothly were Theresa Spagnola, Doris Hittel, and Susan Urso. At one corner of the office I saw Ella Osa, whose desk held the sign plate "Head Stylist." In that instant Julia Bieksha, carrying a suitcase and walking briskly, smiled a greeting but did not stop to converse with me. Palmira enlightened my puzzlement by saying that Julia was the company's buyer in Germany, as Herta Konrad was buyer to France. Bursting into the office came Louis Pinto, who had just put over an immense sale. We congratulated him as did his exceptionally pleased manager, and Palmira and I left amid the rejoicing.

At the end of a corridor, I noticed a door leading to the Chemical Laboratory. Palmira said it would be perfectly all right for us to step in for a minute or two. A queer odor assailed us as we opened the door, for the two chemists, Frank Marano and Herman Alvarez, were then analyzing a certain product to discover its content and to give proof of its quality to the public. Frank Genovese was also in the lab, but seemed puzzled as to why. At another table Carl Schlosser and Ann Wanesko were discussing a scientific problem. Not daring to disturb them further, we quietly made our exit.

"Those are all of the offices that could possibly interest you, but how would you like to walk around the main floor?" Palmira asked of me. Realizing that this meant seeing a few more of my friends, I accepted her suggestion readily. Anthony Leone speeded us down to the seventh floor where women's evening clothes were sold. Helena Slomczewska was modeling a blue, sophisticated evening gown and Olga Petruschak was garbed in a fluffy, ruffled organdy gown and looked as sweet as sweet. Ordinarily salesgirls, they considered modeling for a day great fun. Viewing the gowns with approval, I noticed Florence Marano, Elizabeth Lanza, Ann Fedowitz, and Anne Leonardis. Tea was being served by Hugo Becker and Phil Reilly, who flitted about lightly with noses in air and they asked in supercilious tones, "Tea, Madame?" Columbia Bibbo and Mary deFederico, the two fashion experts, were supervising this fashion show. After having sipped of the delicious tea we left the salon, and coming through the door we saw Mrs. Bennie Grazul (erstwhile Gertrude Meinhard).

On the floor below, we saw Mary Pacella at the children's clothing counter. She was then waiting on Mary Fernicola, who would not be satisfied with any of the little suits shown her. Her little son, Elmer, was very particular about what he wore. Mary was appealing silently to the floor-walker, Tom Mahon, but he ignored. She then beckoned to Paul Bengivenni, but neither would he help her. It appeared that these two gentlemen did not indulge in the practice of helping sweet maidens in distress. Oblivious of the situation of her fellow-worker, Erna Kress was blissfully arranging dolls on the next counter. Since I saw no more of my friends on that floor, Palmira agreed to show me to the radio department. Here we found Carl Yeskel dozing in an easy chair, but this was not surprising for he had been listening to some soothing and enchanting music coming over the radio. "That music comes from our own radio station," Polly informed me, "and that's Ed Tullman's orchestra. Come let's go up to the broadcasting studio."

Just as we were entering the studio, Ed Tullman raised his baton and the orchestra began to play Gershwin's latest song hit, "When You and I Were Young, Maggie." After that number was over, John Seiss crooned softly into the mike, a sad little love song which touched the deepest roots of our hearts. It was sung so hauntingly sweet that we had to leave, lest we weep.

When we were again in the cool corridor, I realized how tired I really was. Palmira led me to the Employees' Restroom where she said we could rest a while. We were welcomed by the nurse, Carmela Zema, who saw to our comfort immediately. In another room we heard the head nurse, Frances Mattues, remonstrating with John Bachmar. "I'm sorry we can't accommodate you any longer. You'll have to go back to your work. I think that's a better cure. I'd head your illness as a bad case of laziness. Goodbye." Realizing he could loaf no longer, John walked out.

When we were settled in some soft, easy chairs, Palmira told me what she had twice attempted to say. "The firm is holding a dinner and dance tonight at the Waldorf-Astoria, which I expect many old East Siders to attend. Would you like to come? I can assure you of a grand time." I accepted enthusiastically, and I also expressed my appreciation to her for having taken me on our little tour. We parted until the night.

I was slipping on my wrap that evening, when the doorbell rang. I opened the door to Don Blakeslee, who said that he had come to escort me to the dance. We went down to the car (no it was not a truck), where Gladys Magnusson and her Hillside heart-throb were waiting for us. Don stepped on the gas and we were off!

At the Waldorf-Astoria, Joe Gorrie and Thad Gurdak, ticket collectors and bouncers, were the first to confront us. Music, gayety, and laughter greeted us as we entered the spacious ballroom. Mary Torre and David Duckworth, Johanna Gialanella and William Becker, Ann Rokosney and Alvin Murphy, were a few of the couples dancing to the rhythmic strains of Ed Tullman and his Orchestra, that I noticed. As I looked about, I also noticed Wilma Gaertner and Ann Fedowitz with Louis Onuska, that noted Technical engineer of South America, and a beautiful young lady were just entering. Sitting at one of the tables were those there "inseparables," Eva Biskup, Catherine Chura, and Marguerite Clarke with their escorts. I learned later that they had set up a little tearoom which was now netting them large returns. Aside from listening and dancing to the exquisite music, we ate a delicious dinner arranged by the most expert chef, Paul Carruba. Everything went on smoothly, and all had a good time. In fact, the night was a huge success!

At home, as I reviewed the events of the day, it gave me joy to think that the graduates of our own East Side High School had attained their places in the world, for which they so diligently struggled for all through school life. I went to bed praying that all the other members of the Class of June, 1935, would have courage and idealism enough to carry them along the same paths of success and contentment as those I had met today.

CAST OF 4A PLAY

"THREE STRIKES, YOU'RE OUT!"

HERE they are folks!—a sight for sore eyes; the cast of the 4A big league comedy "Three Strikes, You're Out!" presented in the school auditorium, April 11th and 12th. I suppose you'd like to know who these "Clark Gables" and "Greta Garbos" are.

Well, here they are, ready to crash the gates of Hollywood, or will it be Broadway?

Wilma Gaertner, who tickled the risibilities of the audience with her side-splitting interpretation of the "dumb" maid, Minnie Hanks.

Arthur Kenlan did a good job in portraying the egotistical Dizzy Wynne, who "talked" the greatest game of baseball.

The invincible Louis Pinto didn't have a hard job in performing the part of the harsh Mortimer Weldon.

His stunning daughter Lita, acted by Carmella Zema, won the hearts of the young men in the audience.

Nicholas De Mauro, as "Papa" Phelps had his "ups and downs" and both looked and acted well the part of a man who loved his wife much but baseball "more."

His wife Lavinia, well interpreted by Violet Kalosy who always had something to say and whose many superstitions bore fruit immediately, if not sooner.

Their daughter Lois, as enacted by Ann Marcinek, whose demonstration of the baseball-crazed girl was well received because of her natural manner.

Dorothy Possiel, Mrs. Potter in the play, did a good job of weeping and of hugging her "half-pint" husband, interpreted by Michael Yawarski. Michael, in turn, proved to be a master at explaining the unexplainable to his wife.

There is the veteran, Gertrude Zimmerman, who improves in every play in which she takes part. This time she contributed her share as the beautiful and high-minded Hester Trader.

And last, but not least, Sollie Levine, as Russel Rogers, the civil engineer, who seemed to be an understudy of one of the Romeos of Movie-land.

The comedy centers around the incidents in the Phelps household where Mrs. Phelps is having trouble with her new maid "Minnie."

Things begin to hum when Mr. Phelps arrives with a person who calls himself "Dizzy" and who immediately impresses with his egotistical ways. Mr. Phelps relates his exciting adventure of an attempt to rob him of his watch, which, as things develop is not his watch at all. Lois upon setting her eyes on Dizzy immediately falls for him much to the disgust of Russel who, by the way, had written an essay as an entry in a prize-winning contest. Then Mrs. Phelps' sister, Ethel, arrives with the story of her lost, newly-wedded husband. Things were bad enough for the Phelps when the owner of the Atlas Paper Bag Co., Weldon, fires his employee Mr. Phelps, for attending baseball games on company time. This combined with Lita's news of the family bank failing paves the way for Russell Rogers' cheering announcement of his winning the thousand dollar essay prize.

Here Mr. Potter arrives and turns out to be the one from whom the watch was stolen; it being his watch that Mr. Phelps mistook for his own. An interesting talk between Mr. and Mrs. Potter ensues.

Lois is the final recipient of the $1,000 and uses it to organize a baseball team, with Dizzy at its head, to play Mortimer Weldon's team in order to see which will get the local franchise.

And the last act is the limit! Dizzy strikes out! Russell hits a home-run and wins the game. Hester announces her surprising engagement to "Duffield Wynne" (Dizzy to you!) and Russell in the last scene shows his ability to stand side by side with Rudolph Valentino when he romances with Lois.

The play was ably coached by the class adviser, Miss Cleary, who was assisted by Betty Cerni as prompter, Virginia Merlino in charge of properties and Carl Schlosser head of the stage-setting committee.

SPORTS

TIME marches on! Soon, some of our prominent notables of sportland shall have graduated. In their footsteps new members shall appear, to attain new glory for our institution. Our heroes have established a precedent standardizing a form of idealism which their successors will strive to maintain.

Part of this glory is due to Mr. Butterworth, Mr. Horwitz, and Mr. Malloy who know how to "manufacture" their "raw material" to produce a "finished product"; and part to the initiative of the boys.

FOOTBALL

This initiative was displayed in those dynamic, heart-stirring football games witnessed last fall.

At the beginning of the season we had Utopian dreams because of our spectacular winning streak. Soon, the face of triumph was darkened by the shadow of honorable defeat. Since the boys were great sportsmen they naturally "took it on the chin."

"Bill" Zisko's name will live forever because he has made the "All-State" as "end." He will be missed on the gridiron as a most versatile player. Captain Thad Gurdak who received honorable mention as "All-State" back is our unforgettable star as the team's leading scorer.

John Siess and James Strelkauskas deserve a large share of the laurels. Walter Thoms also did his bit on a number of occasions.

BASKETBALL

Our basketball team was eased out of the city championship by a narrow margin. Bill Zisko and Stan Rudinski represented the 4A Class and turned in a number of creditable performances.

GYM TEAM

Mr. Butterworth and the entire school were extremely happy over the splendid showing of the Gym Team, especially the capturing of the State Inter-scholastic Gymnastic Championship.

Much of this success is attributed to Vincent D'Autorio, the "Adonis" of the gym team. With his daring stunts and flashy style Vincent easily captured the state championship in tumbling and on the high bar.

John Paliwoda certainly surprised the "boys" by taking second place on the side horse.

Others that deserve honorable mention are Etienne La Pointe, a consistent point-getter who placed second in the "City" and third in the "State" meets.

Louis "Punchy" Onuska and William "Whizz" Becker were invaluable factors in the team's success throughout the session.

The Gym Team, which was undefeated this year in dual meets, captured the "City" title for the seventh consecutive year.

BASEBALL

As long as Mr. Butterworth has been in East Side, he has organized a snappy baseball team which has not allowed the school colors to be rubbed in the dust of defeat.

"Bill" Zisko and Thad. Gurdak, veterans of several seasons are expected to repeat their triumphs of the past.

"Stan" Rudinski is expected to be a top notcher this summer. We are confident that all our succeeding baseball teams will display a feeling of sportsmanship no matter "what the weather."

SWIMMING TEAM

The East Side Swimming Team has been re-organized after a period of inactivity. Although great heights have not yet been attained, the expert instruction of Mr. Richard Miller will probably revive our leadership in this activity.

The leading contenders this year were Captain "Milt" Bialek and Vinicio Fisher who were first and second high scorers respectively.

TRACK TEAM

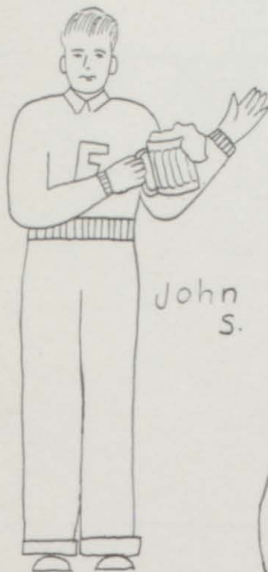

We possess a cracker-jack team which is expected to bring successful results.

John Siess will star in the quarter-mile run and broad jump for the last time in East Side; thus far this season he has taken first place in the javelin throw in the opening meet.

Walter Thoms by taking first place in the high-jump in the opening meet, promises to eclipse his previous records.

We expect to be "surprised" by Louis Pinto who excels in shot-putting.

As a conclusion we wish to state, that from all indications our athletic standing will continue to be the highest in Newark, as it has been in the past.

HUMOR

Mr. Miller: "Why does Missouri stand at the head of the mule raising states?"

A. Peda: "Because the other end is too dangerous."

* * * *

Vincent D'Autorio: "The debate in English between Jimmie Turner and Walter Moydosz was certainly a battle of wit wasn't it?"

Paul Carrubba: "You mean a battle of 'wits' don't you?"

Vincent D'Autorio: "No wit. Two half-wits make one wit."

* * * *

John Howlett: "Have you heard about Charles Biederman's girlfriend? She's an optician's daughter."

Joe Zinkowicz: "Yeah, one glass and she makes a spectacle of herself."

* * * *

F. Telesz: "What is the date, please?"

Mr. Reeve: "Never mind the date. The examination is more important."

Frank—: "Well, sir, I wanted to have something right on my paper."

* * * *

E. Jesse: "Columbia Bibbo dresses to kill."

A. Costa: "I'm afraid she cooks that way."

* * * *

Miss Wetmore: "Why is it you're never doing anything when I come into the room?"

Anthony Leone: "Because you wear rubber heels."

* * * *

Ming: "Anne, do you like simple things?"

A. Leonardis: "Say, what are you doing, proposing?"

* * * *

Louis Pinto, the teachers delight,
Who says what is best and does what is right.

* * * *

Hazel L. is poor Don's fate.
Rescue him boys, before it's too late.

* * * *

Columbia B. whose true love froze,
When Harold G. trod on her toes.

* * * *

Woman-hater Porter, the ladies' man,
Saw a girl look twice, and away he ran!

HUMOR

Frank Marano: "Do you think it's right to punish folks for things they haven't done?"

Miss Wittmeier: "Why of course not, Frank."

Frank Marano: "Well, I didn't do my homework."

* * * *

Miss Bernkopf: "Really, Eugene, your hand writing is terrible. You must learn to write better."

Eugene Gass: "Well, if I did, you'd be finding fault with my spelling."

* * * *

Miss Brown: "Elmer, come up here and give me what you've got in your mouth."

Elmer Lancaster: "I wish I could—it's a toothache."

* * * *

Fannie Mark: "I've lost a lot of weight this winter."

Regina D.: "I don't see it."

Fannie—: "Well no, how could you, I lost it."

* * * *

Frenchy to Ann: "Going anywhere for supper tonight, Ann?"

A—: "No, not tonight."

Frenchy—: "Well, by golly, you'll be a hungry soul tomorrow."

* * * *

Gertrude Z. to Duckworth: "Ducky,—let's lower the lights and read."

Duckworth: "Huh, what kind of reading can you do in the dark?"

Gertie: "Lip reading, silly!"

* * * *

Mr. Malloy: "Leave the room."

Louis Poitrial: "Why?"

Mr. Malloy: "Well, you can't take it with you!"

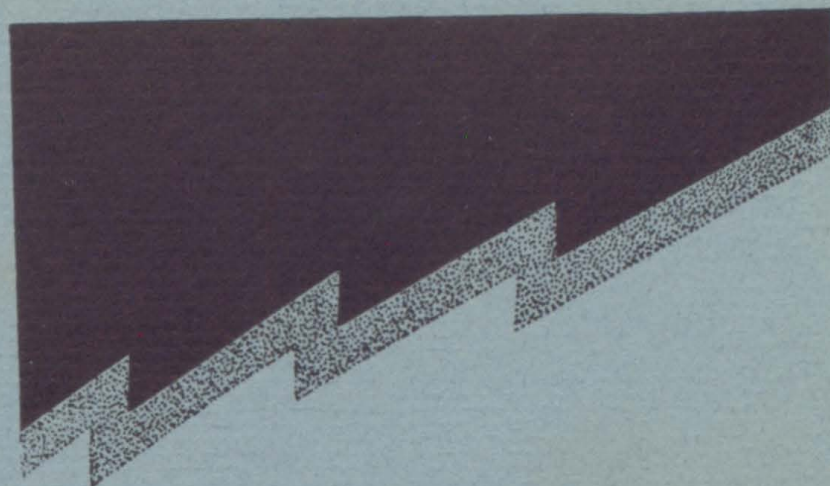

* * * *

Miss Cleary asked John Siess to place "Do not erase" over an Algebra problem.

Absent-minded Siess erased the problem, then politely placed the words on the board.

* * * *

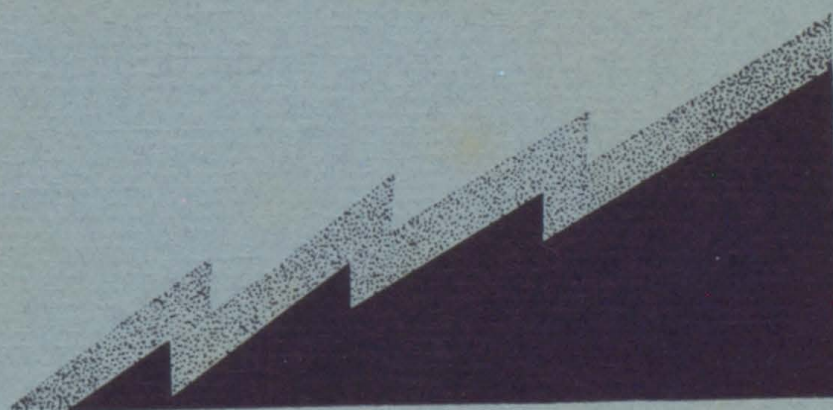

John Paliwoda of the Business Course asked to say Grace, said: "Dear Lord, we are in receipt of your kind favors of recent date and beg to thank you. We hope to merit your continued courtesy."

It's A Steep Climb

The hill called Life has plenty of room at its peak for those who succeed, but the way to the top is not an easy one.

Preparation is the vital factor.

Make the most of every opportunity to better yourself and you will find the going much smoother.

SCHOOL AND COLLEGE PRINTERS

THE ART OF PRINTING

The invention of printing from movable types, made in Holland near the middle of the fifteenth century, was the most significant invention of civilized man. The priceless jewel of knowledge, which for centuries could be the possession of only a privileged few, was made available to all by the development of printing. During the last five centuries printing has progressed not only as the spreader and preserver of knowledge and culture, but also as the finest of the graphic arts.

We take pride in turning out artistic printing. Our plant represents the last word in modern equipment, skillful craftsmanship, and dependable service.

You regard your yearbook as the reflection of your school; we regard it as a sample of the art of printing.

Our specialty is distinctive printing that both you and we can be proud of.
